Expectations

Expectations for Spiritual Character

We expect individuals on our worship team to have a personal and growing relationship with the Lord. We want to be people who strive to show integrity and character that honors Christ both in and away from the church. This includes how we talk/act, how we treat others, and what we participate in. As a team, we want to be unified in our purpose and in our relationships with each other. We expect honesty as well as love and grace in our communication.

Expectations for Faithfulness

We expect that everyone will do their best to faithfully attend the practices and services that they are scheduled for. We expect everyone to not only be punctual, but ready to begin on time. Communication is key! If there are dates where you are unavailable, let Micah know as soon as possible so that other arrangements can be made as necessary. If you are late or if something comes up unexpectedly that prevents your attendance, send a text or call. You are a valued and important part of the worship team. However, if at any time, you feel that the Lord wants you to take a break from serving or if you need to scale back your involvement, let Micah know. We don't ever want leading worship to feel like a burden to those involved.

Expectations for Being On Stage

We expect our worship team to honor Christ and avoid distraction in how we present ourselves on stage. This is true of both our demeanor and how we dress. You are expected to dress modestly and appropriately for leading others in worship in our church. If you are unsure about a particular outfit, always play it safe. We expect everyone to strive for a joyful, worshipful, reverent, and pleasant demeanor when on stage. We want to be engaged and passionate without drawing attention to ourselves. Our goal is to point others to Jesus, and for all of the focus to be on Him.

Expectations for Excellence

Our biggest desire is to do our very best and glorify the Lord in everything that we do. While none of us will ever be perfect, we do want to strive for excellence in how we sing, play and lead. We know that this only comes from practice and preparation. You are expected to learn and know the scheduled songs and your specific parts. Be mindful that when singing/playing with a team, oftentimes, less is more. Your voice and instrument needs to support and promote the whole. Always consider how you can be a complementary addition and avoid stepping on other member's parts. This means being aware that there will be sections where you should not sing or play.
